

Graduate Fellowships

Application Materials Due November 30, 2018

The Public Policy Lab (PPL) supports Graduate Fellows and their scholarship addressing either public policies themselves or social conditions and processes with implications for public policy. We welcome scholars using a wide variety of methodological approaches. Graduate Fellows, appointed for one academic year, are awarded up to $2,000 to cover research costs (such as conference travel or software purchases) and join a diverse cohort of scholars in an interdisciplinary forum for discussion of contemporary policy issues. Graduate Fellows participate in our on-going PPL Fellowship Workshop in which participants present work in progress and provide feedback on each other's written work, alongside our Research Team Fellows and Faculty Fellows.

Eligibility: PPL's Graduate Fellowships are open to all College of Liberal Arts (CLA) advanced Ph.D. students who are in good standing. Applicants must be working on a policy-oriented research project and be able to participate in the regular PPL Fellowship Workshop by reading other participants' work, attending sessions to provide feedback, and presenting one's own work.

Application Procedure: Applications for Graduate Fellows are due on November 30, 2018. Materials will be reviewed by an interdisciplinary committee of CLA faculty. Applicants must submit:

1. A current C.V.
2. A project statement (2 to 3 double-spaced pages, not including bibliography) describing your project and its policy relevance. Also include a statement indicating when you achieved or expect to achieve candidacy, your expected graduation date, and your intended accomplishments during the fellowship.
3. A statement of support from a faculty advisor, preferably the dissertation chair, emailed to PPL@temple.edu

All materials must be submitted to goo.gl/YrEZG8 by the application deadline.

Questions? Please contact us by email at PPL@temple.edu